for not only has a confiding boniface been bamboozled, but a host of friends and acquaintances of the adventurer have been left in the lurch.

The beene of the exploit was the Hotel Arcadia, at Santa Monica, where, during August, in the full flush of the season, arrived one day a well-dressed, good-looking young man, who, as he returned J. of first-class style and make, and, judging by his general appearance and that of his outfit, he was a man of means.

He soon became a marked figure about the hotel lobby, for he, as a rule, wore a jaunty nautical cap, and an inquiry as to whether he was a seafaring man elicited the response that he was a fleutenant of H.M.S. Nile, and that he was absent on sick leave. To the night-clerk he confided one evening that he had an income of $5000 a year, and he certainly lived up to that figure. Every morning he weuld go for a ride, and in the afternoon Mr. Beville's stable would accommodate him with horses and buggies, for he was a great believer in exercise that would not call very much for an application of his own powers.

He soon became acquainted with the people about the hotel, and being possessed of an excellent bass voice and considerable musical talent, he was much in demand at the piano in the drawing-room. His circle of friends gradually widened, and at last he was among the invited to partake of afternoon tea at Senator Jone's mansion, thus climbing to the very top of the social tree. He is quite popular with the English contingent resident in Santa Monica, and Capt. Tomkinson, Dr. Edmonds and others were among his stanchest admirers. He said fe was the champion tennis player of South Scotland, so he was admitted to the honors of the Casino Club, and, later on, he declared himself a polo wielder, and was also elected into that organization.

His history was soon made known through his own medium. He announced that he was a Dublin Irishmen, and that he was a Dublin Irishmen, and that he was a Dublin Irishmen, and that he was a public Irishmen, and that he was a public Irishmen, and that he was a public Irishmen, and that he was generally understood that the Lake City was his headquisters in this country.

run short. Once he wast up to Les and came back with a few dollars, with which he settled a bar bill and one or two small debts, and them he was "broke again." It was about three weeks ago when financial nothingness again overtook him, and since that time he journeyed through life aided by money borrowed from those who had any confidence in him. Everywhere that he could run a credit account he did so. Not satisfied with having the run of Mr. Beville's stable, he bestowed some of his patronage on Woodhouse & Proctor's establishment, anti in addition to his score at the Argadia bar he ran one up at Giroux's Kimball's and other available places.

They will have the finest clubrooms of any athletic assoc ation on the coast outside of San Francisco. due. The Dubliner said that he would go up to town next day for it. So he did, but during the night he got his valies full of clean clothes out of his room, and managed to get it shipped to Los Angeles the next morning, whither he followed on the afternoon train. And thus he went, without asying good-by to Mr. Scott, to whom he owed over $100; without a word of farewell to livery-stable-keepers Beville, Woodhouse & Proctor, to whom he was indebted about $30; without that added which would have caused a pang of regret to Bob Eckert, Charley Kimball, Giroux, Frank, Tom Darmody and the many saloon men who had given him refreshments in the hour of need; and, shameful be it to relate, without even a parting smile to that host of friends who had on sundry and divers occasions loosened their pocket-strings in his behalf.

HE IS CORRALED. This all happened on Friday, and on Saturday Mr. Scott went in pursuit and corraled him in the Depot Hotel, kept by Simon Rheinhardt. Inglis was forced to go to the bank, where he had claimed the draft awaited him, but, when there, the cashier stated that the "b'hoy from Dublin" had no account, nor, in his opiaion, was he likely to have one. Mr. Scott had too large a heart to place the defaulter under arrest, so Her Majesty's alleged naval representative is still at large, and has another opportunity to ply his wits for a livelihood. From information otherwise obtained, it appears that his father keeps a store in Dublin; that he never was in the navy, and that his family has disowned him for being a black sheep. and corraled him in the Depot Hotel, for the past four months, and it is due to the efforts of Messra. Stanton & Co. that it is secured for this section, for this section for those gentlemen by means of a bonus fought successfully the applicants from San Luis Obispo and other northern cities. Not only will milk and coffee be condensed, as the name of the company would imply, but the factory will refine sorghum, fruit juices and also do a general crystallization business. A cannery will be in connection with the establishment, and the finest machinery has been ordered for the fitting up of the place.

The location is to be at Buena Park on the line of the Southern Pacific just opposite the Centralia Colony, and ground will be broken today, for it is the intention to have the whole concern in running order in 60 days from date. The Southern Pacific will put up a suitable depot at the place, and a sidetrack is to be constructed to the factory.

As an evidence of what this acquistion means it may be stated that at first the company will take the milk of 1000 cows daily, and as much fruit as can be supplied. As business increases so will the demand for supplies, so cattlemen and fruit-raisers hereabouts will appreciate this new addition to their interests. Messrs. Stanton & Co. have done a good stroke of work for the section in securing this boon and any personal benefit that they may derive from it is well deserved.

The Pastor Retires as the Result of Dissensions.

The resignation of Rev. J. S. Gilfillan from the pulpit of Bethany Church is very deeply deplored by almost the entire congregation, over a score of whom have since asked for their letters of withdrawal. There were but two malcontents. The pastor could have stayed, with 78 out of the 75 members supporting him, but considered in have stayed, with 73 out of the 75 members supporting him, but considered it best to resign. The church grew very rapidly and appeared very useful and harmonious while located at Belmont Heights, and has grown reasonaly since March last in its present location. A desire for a real estate "boom," on the part of one or two persons, seems to lie at the bottom of the trouble, the material consideration of a gift lot, though opposed by other more churchly considerations, having been the cause of the removal to the present location, which is out of the way for most of the members.

CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLING. Foreman of the Briswalter Prop-erty in Trouble. F. Rucon was arrested at 7 p.m. Saturday evening on a warrant charging him with embezzlement. The com-plaint was aworn to by G. J. Griffith, the well-known capitalist and stock-holder in the Briswalter tract. Rucon holder in the Briswalter tract. Bucon has for some time past been employed by Mr. Griffith as foreman of the Briswalter tract, and in this capacity large sums of money have passed through his hands. Mr. Griffith lately became dissatisfied with the manner in which Rucon managed his affairs, and an investigation led him to swear out the above-mentioned complaint. Before Judge Austin yesterday, Rucon's ball was fixed in the sum of $1000, and Mesars. Ducasse, Eyraud and Biscailuz furnished the necessary bonds.

cannot but be impressed with the intellectual plane upon whice speakers stand. An unusual at of knowledge and elequence, he visionary, is displayed at each ing, and the general debates close of the exercises are interes. Heretofore the meetings have characterized more by glittering eralizations than by any tangib practical suggestions. The meetings have the control of the contro meetings. The auditorium was filled, no vacant seats being observed.

Dr. Peebles, the president, made a short address in opening the proceedings, saying that last week he had taken occasion to find fault with the public for misunderstanding and misconstruing the aims and purposes of the present movement; this week he desired to find fault with the movement itself. It has been said by the advocates of the reforms desired to be effected, that it will take 50 to 100 years for that result to be reached, but now he thought, persons now living will see many radical changes for the better before they die. He believes that it is time to remove the Nationalist movement from the shadowy future, and invest it with a personal interest. He does not believe that interest will be taken by the masses of the people in these reforms unless they see in the near future a direct personal benefit to be derived, which they themselves will enjoy. Let the people once believe that reforms on this line will take place within five or ten years, if a concerted effort is made, and converts will flock to the standard of nationalism by the thousand, and the few that hold back will stand aghast at the sweeping nature of the forces at work. All great reforms have been started in this manner, and the nearer the Nationalists teach that the reforms will come, the sooner they will come.

Dr. Peebles further said that it will the reforms will come, the stoom will come.

Dr. Peebles further said that it will be a good idea to call a county convention of all the Nationalist clube, and agree upon some one reform, which shall be urged upon Congress. That which he suggested is the absolute control of the railroads of the country by the Government. If one step is accomplished, all the rest will follow. Step by step must be taken. People say all this debuting is good, but what the Green and th will not be to rob man of an incentive to effort, but will equip him more thoroughly for the grand race. The highest prizes of life are not based on money values. The true luster of a great name is dimmed by the suspicion of mercenary motives. There is a competition, true, natural and salutary; an ineradicable force, working constantly toward the best, and that will be stimulated by removing the unbealthy competition which now rules the world.

As to cooperation, the speaker holds that its discussion has been weakened by a large dilution of platitudes. Many talk about cooperation who have no idea of what it means. The principle of cooperation admits of no differences; the methods do. True cooperation on a basis of aimole justice will entirely revolutionize existing methods. It is practiced now in thousands of instances.

Individualism, the speaker insisted, is one of the elements of the movement. The most valuable man in society is the one who makes the most of himself. This is his birthright, and when the reforms are accomplished that principle will be even more accentuated than before. But for the assertion of this principle society would become a dead level. The geography of society must have its that principle will be even more accentuated than before. But for the assertion of this principle society would become a dead level. The geography of society must have its mountain peaks as well as valleys.

In conclusion, urged the speaker, nationalism means such a utilization of the resources and forces of society as will afford the individual the opportunity te do the best there is in him, and to give him justice. He believes that all political parties are out of line with the pressing demands of the age, and that this movement will result in radical changes.

J. Noubauer read a short paper upon the speech of Mr. Larkin, delivered at the last meeting of the club, taking issue with him upon his theories. This was followed by a debate participated in by a number of members of the club.

GOLD! GOLD!

GOLD! GOLD!

A startling cry of the discovery of gold down near the Raymond Hotel spread through the city last evening. A workman, while employed in digging 20 feet below the surface in the line of the sewer, saw some specimens of placer gold, amounting to about $2 worth, and at once gave the news to the people in the wildest exaggerated reports. This morning Col. Bellaire, an old-timer among the Black Hills, went down to the spot, and, at last accounts, was digging further in the strata. If there are untoid millions in it, as some predicted, the city can stake out claims down there, and, if there is any dust, can soon be able to buy a right of way for her sewers through Alhambra, and, if not that, buy the whole village and her dissenting population.

Officer Robbins, while parading his best at an early hour this morning, saw a boy, a bicycle and a sidewalk. He gave chase for about four blocks, until the wheelman lost himself in the distant air. Ordinance No. 74 does not seem to be a "dead-letter" law.

About eight of the local wheelmen took a ride this afternoon among the denizens of El Monte. After looking over the beautiful spots in that village the bicyclists returned home, hungry, but in good spirits.

SANTA MONICA, Sept. 29.—[Correspondence of THE TIMES.] Although the seasonal attendance has naturally fallen off, still a fair sprinkling of peo ple was brought down today by the Los Angeles and Pacific and Southern Pacific roads. Enough, anyhow, to line the sands with an animated throng, and to bring a silver harvest into the treasury of the bathhouse proprietors. Those who came were also evidently well pleased with what they found, for the majority lingared about until the sounding of the alarm whistles for the last trains.

Society Dania Picnic.
The Society Dania gave its annual picnic yesterday at the South Main-street Park. There was a large attendance, who thoroughly enjoyed the day. Games and dancing were induced in during the afternoon and dulged in during the atternoon and evening. The officers of the society having the affair in charge were J. C. An Unfortunate. At 12:45 p.m. yesterday Officer Dor-sey found John Dunne on Aliso street, much exhausted and evidently in great pain. He took him to the station, where he was examined by Dr. Morrison and found to be suffering from severe aneurism of the left arm, caused by an old knife wound inflicted three years ago. The arm had swollen to twice its natural size, and amputation will very probably be found necessary.

THE QUESTION SETTLED.

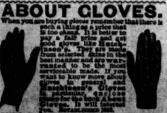

This out is a faithful ploture of the well known setablishment of Thomas Price*d Son, at 524 Sacramento street, B. F. As the leading chemists of the west, they were asked to settle the question as to what sarsaparillas were in fact purely vegetable. We present their report. "We have made careful chemical analyses of several well known breads of areaparilla, and have found them all with the single exception of Joy's to contain toldide of polassium. As a vesual see are capided to pronounce Joy's to be the only-purely expetable sarsaparilla now on the market, which has come under our observation." Modern medicine has proven that all ordinary face cruptions are not caused by diseased blood, but by indigestion and slungish circulation, which call for vegetable Sarsaparilla being the latest, is the first to diseard the old notions and proceed under the modern theory. Its cures attest the soundness of the theory. It is the talk of the hour.

SEVERAL Republican Congressmen are reported to be in favor of a 2 per cent. United States bond, to run 100 years, and to be used especially as the sis for national-bank circulation. It seems that the national banks want to raise their circulation to the par value of bonds they hold, but fear to ask for such a concession, unless the rate of interest is reduced. Meantime, 'as shown by us the other day, 'the increased circulation of silver certificates promises to solve the national-bank problem, in another and more satisfactory manner. A DIFFICULT PROBLEM

terview with a Washington correspond-ent. Maj. Warner said that there was nothing in the position for him, as the salary is only $5000 a year, while his law practice gives him about $30,000 a year. He added: Tanner thorsted an end out of the Panyear. He added:

Tanser knocked an end out of the Pension Bureau, and there is a Comemangh Valley flood rushing through. I see asked to stand in front of that stream and attempt to stem it. You can imagine what the result will be. I cannot stem it, and, in attempting to do so, I will injure myself. All the elements are against me. The conservative, level-headed sentiment of the country has, unfortunately, arrived at the conclusion that the Pension Office, as administered during the last few months, was a machine for the destruction of the surplus. The harder that I will try to convince the people that an error is in existence, the more I will do to do myself up. In other words, the people are convinced, and don't want to have their minds changed. If I try to satisfy the people, I will offend the old soldiers, and, if I try to satisfy the old soldiers, and, if I try to satisfy the people, I will offend the old soldiers, and, if I try to satisfy the old soldiers, I will oftend the people. The man who succeeds Tanner must coolly and deliberately put himself forward as a martyr. He must expect to be ruined, either on the altar of his country or on the altar of his party.

The above remarks furnish food for thought, and explain, to a great ex-thought, and explain, to a great ex-tent, the cause of the delay in securing a successor to Corporal Tanner. Com-menting on the difficulty of making a suitable selection for the place, the Cincinnati Times-Star says:

Cincinnati Times-Star says:

To supervise the disbursement of $60,000,000 to $100,000,000 a year is, perhapa, the most responsible task intrusted to any single appointee of the President, and to discharge it properly, with due regard to the rights of pensioners on one hand and of axpayers on the other, requires above all else business capacity. The very best man of affairs whom the President can find will have use for all the financial experience and business capacity he can command. If such a man can be found in the G.A.K., well and geod; if not, then he should be sought elsewhere. It is for the highest interests of pension-receivers and pension-payers sitkle that used a man be found somewhere and placed at the head of the bureau. That President Harrison has a difficult task before him, there is no doubt.

A NEW DEPARTURE IN RAIL

ROADING. A new system recently introduced among Austro-Hungarian railroads carries some good hints for American roads. An investigation of the old system made for the Government showed that the first-class cars run, on showed that the first-class cars run, on an average, with nine-tenths of their seats empty, the second-class with four-fifths, and the third-class with about two-thirds of their seats empty. Comparing these figures with the weights of cars and trains, it was found that the railroad companies, for the sake of conveying one first-class passenger, hauled, on an average, a dead weight of more than three tons; ever second-class passenger. med on the Nicaragus Canal at an rly data.

Briton:

You Americans are gettling so that you have no interest for any time but the present. Years ago we used to think that we were pretty wide-awake when we coined the phrase "men of the day." But, bless me, you have no use for men of the day; you only care to know about "men of the hour." And I expect that you will very soon ignore everybody but men of the minute. The American people live on the slarp point of the passing moment, and seem to enjoy it.

MANUAL labor is becoming more and more thrown into the background by machinery, but few have ever con ceived of the possibility that the tedious toil of the silk-worm might eventually be dispensed with. Yet, that result is likely to be attained. A French savan has successfully produced several yards of silk by means of a collodion solution, a copper receiver and glass tubes. The product is said to be, in many respects, superior to the wormspun article.

tractive programme, consisting of yachting, mountain-climbing, goathunting, bathing, lawn tennis, a ball, musicales, card parties, etc., will be arranged, and everything done to insure the enjoyment of the occasion. The attendance promises to be large. The encampment will probably be an annual affair.

Tom Roe, the intrepid Chicago wheelman who is riding from San Francisco to Chicago, via the Santa Fé route, reached Tehachepi Saturday night, a week's ride from the starting point. He is making good time and he reports himself in good condition. Roe will have a grand welcome when he reaches Chicago. He will be met a number of miles out of Chicago by over five hundred wheelmen, and he will be escorted into the city in a manner be fitting the difficult task of wheeling across the western half of the continent. He will be presented with a testimonial in honor of the feat and will be tendered a banquet. Roe is attempting to hreak Thomas Stevens's record from San Francisco to Chicago, which is 59 days. Roe says he intends making the distance under 50 days. Roe labors under more disadvantages than Stevens met with, and they are a longer distance and a poorer route. Should Roe reach Chicago before the winter has set in, he will continue on to New York, making a transcontinental trip which will be without parallel in the annals of bieycling.

The Los Angeles Wheelmen will hold their semi-annual election of officers next Wednesday evening, and an entirely new board of officers will be elected. Radical changes in the club's policy will be inaugurated, and the organization promises to be a live and progressive one hereafter.

Lift.

Los Angeles, Bept. St.—[To the Editor of The Thurs.] Will you allow a citizen and tarpayer to ask the honorable Council of the city of Los Angeles, through your columns, why it is that the new and beautiful 5000-elevator in the City Hall building is only run between the aristocratic hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m.?

This costly elevator was put in mainly for the use of the patrons of the Public Library, and it is a very necessary convenience, so much so that its shutting down at 5 o'clock is a great hardship and annoyance to the large number of ladies and others who are compelled to climb the stairs to the third story of the building.

If the elevator was put in, as it was pretended, for the use of the public who are patrons of the library, it should at least be kept running as long as the library is kept open, which is till 9:30 o'clock p.m.

Please call strention to this and should at least be kept running as long as the library is kept open, which is till 9:30 o'clock p.m. Please call attention to this and is the center of attraction toward which all eyes turn. This picture, the masterpiece of a loyal Russian artist, was first exhibited at the Antwerp Exposition in 1885, and sent a thrill of admiration and delight to every art center in Europe. Into this canwas Makoffsky seems to have thrown the whole essence of his artistic genius, his highest ambition being that it should be given a place in the imperial galleries of the Czar.

His Highness, however, was more considerate of the artist's fortunes than was the painter himself, for he commanded that the picture should be sent to the great exposition. "Let the nations of the world see it," he said, "and let it go to him who shows the highest appreciation of your work." That the medal of bonor was awarded this painting goes without saying; the "Russian Wedding Feast" became the central sun of the entire art exhibition. Scores of connoisseurs and diplomatic dealers from all parts of Europe immédiately began negotistions for the picture, but a shrewd American cutwitted them all and got possession of the prize. While letters were passing between Antwerp and St. Petersburg, this enterprising American used the telegraph. He wired a fabuous price to St. Petersburg, and, when that was declined, still more astonishing figures were promptly dispatched, and, in the end, American grit and determination won the prize, and Mr. Schumann of New York became the owner of the famous painting although the cost of the supper, which this well-known business man was compelled to give in celebration of his victory, exceeded that of a score of similar affairs, he was very gisd to pay the bill. The news of the purcline of this European work of art by a wealthy American spread from one art center of the costly purchase, and promptly returned to Europe to persolally superintend, the

It is rich; in tells a glad story; there is a charming bride in the foreground, standing before the assembled guests, who are gathered round the banquet table; the similarity streams through the recesses of the windows; the wax tapers shine dimly, and the flash and glow of gorgeous and jeweled costumes, to gather with the glitter of the quaintly conventions of older and richness to the second.

"THE LAST HOURS OF MOZART."

It is a picture which appeals to the heart as well as to the eye. The face of the dying composer has a glorified expression, as he listens intently, for the first and only time, to the strains of his unfinished requiem, fragments of which are being performed by a few of his friends. All the details are admirably designed and executed, but the eye of the spectator, wherever it may wander over the canvas—to the faces of the singers, the form of Mozart's wife in the background, or the group of friends just within the door—always returns with fresh interest to the central figure, the plaintive and etherealized face of this master of music who died so young, and who left such a legacy of beauty to a world that showed such tardy recognition of his genius.

a group of Syrian abspherds chatting in the moonlight, in utter unconscious-ness of the great event about taking pess of the great event about taking place, is a masterly painting by Harry B. Poere, and was awarded the prize of $2000 at the prize fund exhibition in New York. Mr. Poere, in his youth, was for several years a resident of California, and was about to enter the University of California, when his family was called East, and he became a student in the National Academy of Design in New York in 1876. He has become famous as an animal painter, and is recognized as one of the celebrated artists of the day.

A GROUP OF PICTURES.
In figure pieces, "Shucking Corn,"
by Maria Brooks, a large painting of a by Maria Brooks, a large painting of a colored girl, is one of the best. Dinah is represented true to life, and as her brawny arms strip the husks from the golden ears she looks as if she might easily rise, take off her blue-check apron and hang it on the nall above her head.

"A Comfortable Pose," a pink and whits combination of girl and muslin, by James Fagan, is a pleasing picture, and "In-Holiday Attire," by Edwin A. Bell, would naturally cause one to auppose that little girls in holiday costume have putty faces and lead arms and legs.

Of marine views, Rose Turner exhibits the best work, a moonlight scene nibits the best work, a mooning on the ocean.

In landscapes, "The Time of Blossoms," a view of an apple orchard, by Arthur Parton, is one of the gems of the collection. "A Stormy Sunset," by Charles Warren Eaton, is a fine piece of cloud-work, and "November" and "Declining Day," from the brush of the same artist, who seems to de-ways to the most interesting collections of exhibits to the effect that all who enterthere must leave behind 25 cents. All this arouses suspicion in the wary and inquiring mind of the average Yankee, and he is extremely liable to withdraw his presence and keep away after the first visit. It would also lend dignity to the occasion to exclude all cheap sideshows. It is not specially inspiring to the art student, while studying the picture of Mozart, to listen to the brayings of a fourth-rate band as it executes "Johnnie Come Load Your Gun" in the museum at the side of the Art Gallery. Quite a contrast to the exhibition of the famous painting in Paris, when the unfinished requiem of the composer was played by unseen musicians while the picture was on view, lending realism to the scene, and making the figures on the canvas seem to waken into life under the influence of the well-known strains.

BEYOND THE SEA.

The Mountains of Europe and Its Races.

Pontresina (Switzerland), Aug. 30.—[Special Correspondence of The Trikes.] The Eugadine is a region of the Grisons at the east end of Switzerland, situated about 6000 feet high and surrounded by mountains which stand up around it 2000 or 3000 feet higher. Its peculiarly tonic and pure atmosphere has led to its being highly commended to health seekers; while the glaciers and mountain climbing, its baths and grand scenery attractothers. The axis of the region is the valley of the Inn an affluent of the Danube and it is no mere punjoke to say its inhabitants are chiefly inn keepers. The river heads up at Maloja and at short distances apart, either in the main valley or its tributaries, all other villages of which St. Moritz and Pontresina are the ones chiefly resorted to. The mountain wall on the south divides Switzerland from Italy, and the people living on the slope, whose waters shed off to the Po, are distinctly Italian in features, dress, architecture, etc., and are Catholic in religion. Those in the Alpine region of the Eugadim are canny, shrewd, and Protestant, speaking the Romanish dialect. In fact, in this small district of an infinitesimal nation, there are three dialects of this modification of the old Roman tongue. Nothing is more striking to an American than the persistence of divers languages and of distinct dialects in Europe. You passion and the content villes and the dialect of the onther villes and the dialect of the onther villes. The Mountains of Europe and Its midestand perfectly those of the next; yeu uses a range, say 10 miles, and an absolutely different language and a different type of people meet you. The distinctions are as obvious as the changes of color on the map, while with us one may pass over the Alleghanies, or, indeed, for the matter of that, over the Rockies and Sierraa, and find the people, language, laws, money and customs barely distinguishable from those at home.

Here one is surrounded with historical monuments, not only in imperiabable bronze and stone, but in names and types of mankind. My neighbor is Mr. Saratz, a swarthy man of Saracenic hue and characteristics, as well as name. Numerous other indelible names of the conquering Saracens are sprinkled over this country, for in their invasions of Europe this tide of Asiatics pushed as far west as Vevey.

The north wall of the Inn (or Inngadine) sheds its waters, on the northern side, to the Rhine; and here the German type prevails. The Rhine has its roets among the perplexed mountains of this culminating point of Western Europe; but wherever a fish can swim up from the German type is dominant. In the west of Switzsrland, there, as a rule, the German type is dominant. In the west of Switzerland, the so-called Bernese Oberland (highland) Mountains extend east and west, and reach almost to the Jura range, which latter has a general direction north and south. The Jura's divide France from Suisse. Between the Berne Highland range and the Savoy Alps lies the valley in which the Rhone takes its rise, starting from an awful glacier—the Rhone glacier. In the Savoy range stand up Mt. Blanc, Monte Rosa and other fine peaks—the range being crossed by the St. Bernard and similar passes. The valley of the Kee Rhone after flowing a long distance between its snow-capped walls debouches into and fills up with its blue waters, the chasm called Lake Leman or Lake Geneva, leaving Chillens Castle in the east and the quays of the classic old town of Calvin, Geneva, at the west. Hence the Rhine speeds onward through France to the Mediterranean. This, then, is the door from Gaul; and, apeaking broadly, the Rhine from its source to the Mediterranean waters a French-speaking people. Thus, within a short distance from the apex of clurope at the St. Gothard Pass rise the Danube, flowing to the east, the Rhine to the north, the Po to the Adriatic and the Rhine to the Mediterranean. Up into these Alpine regions the successive waves of humanity have swept, leaving their high-tide marks on the personality, the language and the nomenciature, marks not rubbed out by time or intercourse.

With us, the cavaliers of Virginia and Carolina, the Puritans of New England, the Quakers and Germans of Pennsylvania and Jarsey, have been intermingled, and though we can dimly recognize the streaks of bright Hugenot blood, we are all interfused. Though the Catholic Spanish and French have not been quite absorbed, yet the dominant English have imposed their language and their law, and given to the Nation its special characteristic. Speaking broadly again, the uniformity of our people is in a triking contrast to the sharp diversities one meets in Europe. Even the negro has been

The 3-year-olds which have appeared in public this season are very much below the average, and it is difficult to pick from their number any one whose form has been consistently good. In the early spring Proctor Knott's name was on the tip of everyone's tongue as the coming champion, but Spokane shattered the idol of Sam Bryant's heart, the Kentucky Derby. Two days afterward, in the Clark stakes. Spokane repeated his victory, and when he added the American Derby to his other victories it seemed as if the champion 3-year-old of the year was found at last. His after form, however, was very bad, and it is doubtful whether, at the present moment, he could win a decent selling race.

Diablo, Salvator, Longstreet, Tenny and Reporter have all shown good form, but none of them have demonstrated their ability to defeat their elder companions at weight for age. Tenny is perhaps the best of the lot, and up to seventh-eighths of a mile, Reporter, who has displayed marked improvements lately, is worth following. Theo. Winters'c colt, El Rio Rey, is of course the wonder of the year, but as it is impossible to gauge the merit of a 2-year-old, where his performances have been confined entirely to races for 2-year-old, where his performance, when, in defeating August Halmont's great 4-year-old, Haclastended to 2-984, and Oilcloths, Mattings and Window Shades, ORRIS 119 CONVERCIAL ST. 243, 245 & 247 SOUTH SPRING STREET I believe that people see the world through their stomachs far more frequently than they are aware of. A dyspeptic outlook is not a cheerful one. I should rather live with a dozen mothers-in-law, forty spinster aunts with their pets of cats and dogs, their prim, set ways, than hold a close relation with one dyspeptic stomach. I never lay up any unkind remark that a confirmed dyspeptic may make about me, for I siways try to bear in mind that he does not look at the world out of clear-visioned eyes, but out of a stomach that distoris everything and keeps him upon a worse than purgatorial rack. I remember, years ago, of hearing a poor old man abuse a bright little woman of his acquaintance, charging her with all sorts of improper actions, not one of which she was guilty of, and after he had left her she turned to me with a smile, saying: "Poor old gentleman, his breakfast does not agree with him." This was the only comment she made, but as I knew later, it was a sufficient explanation of his crustiness and unjust charges.

the only comment she made, but as I knew later, it was a sufficient explanation of his crustiness and unjust charges.

With such results, therefore, I am getting to feel that there is a good deal of religion in good digestion, and no small amount of moral depravity in the opposite condition. If this be true, what a means of grace is wholesome food, proper culinary knowledge and a well-prepared table. The world is getting to understand that violated physical law is followed by punishment just as surely as any other law, and if we would have health, long life and cheerfulness, the laws which govern our physical being cannot be disregarded. Of course, there is a wide difference between crankery and common-sense. I have known cranks who looked askance at every tid-bit that was placed uron the table; who eschewed coffee lest it make them bilious, when there wasn't enough of biliousness in their make-up to be affected by all the coffee raised in Brazil; who went around with flabby, weak muscles, because they would not nourish them with meat, but clung wholly to a vegetable diet. But in all these things there is a golden mean, which, when discovered, will keep us in a good condition if we are only governed by it.

The clothes on our back give us usually more concern than the coats of our stomachs. Herein lies our folly. I thoroughly believe what an unknown writer has asserted, that "people in general enjoy a sounder ignorance upon the common sense of eating and drinking than upon any other prevalent fashion of the day. Food and feeding are absolutely the most important considerations that affect our bodily and therefore our mental welfare."

And, now, I would like to give my readers a thought for consideration as most important considerations that affect our bodily and therefore our mental welfare."

And, now, I would like to give my readers a thought for consideration as regards the difference between Food and Feeding. What is Food? Just that proportion of what we swallow, which is thoroughly digested. What is Feeding? A fascinating, popular pastime? Yes, and it is also, or should be, the art and science of selecting the digestibles which best replace the waste in our individual body, while giving us pleasure after, rather than during eating."

The important question for each of us is to find out what foods feed; which have the most value and which the most waste. As says a certain writer on "Dinnerelogy." "We must learn our A B C of foods and their properties. Everything we eat and drink has a certain amount of waste in it, often a mischievous amount. In the solids there is more liquid than we fancy, so much feed-forming material, and a residue of solid waste. Get to know just the proportions of these materials there are in your bread, mush, steak, fish and pie crust, and then you are for the first time in your life qualified to outwit the doctor in his own domain by preventing nine-tenths of the ailments which nine-tenths of the medicos never cure."

I think that in our papers we will hereafter consider some of these things.

week from clippings from the Pacific Rural. The recipes are simple, and will, I am sure, give general satisfac-tion. The "Quick Pudding" will be especially weicome and convenient when "Jehn" is absent and you are compelled to look after the dessert yourself.

Rudolph I., founder of the Austrian imperial family, and of the Hapsburg dynasty, was the son of Albert IV., Count of Hapsburg, and was born May 1, 1218. By marriage and in other ways he extended his hereditary dominions, so that when he became king he was lord not only of Hapsburg, but also of the counties of Kyburg and Lenzburg and of the Landgraviate of Alsace. He carried on wars against the bishop of Strasburg and the Abot Alsace. He carried on wars against the bishop of Strasburg and the Abbot of St. Call, and was struggling with the city of Basel in 1273, when the landgrave at Nurenburg brought him word that he had been elected Emperor of Germany. Basel at once submitted to him, and Rudolph was crowned at Aix-la-Chappelle on October 28, 1273. During the great interregnum, the barons had become so independent that they would have preferred to have no emperor, but Gregory X. threatened to appoint one if they failed to make an election. Rudolph gained many victories over the Palsgrave Louis and Duke Albert of Saxony, the latter of whom married his daughter. Ottocar, King of Bohemia and Henry, Duke of Bavaria, were forced to submit to the imperial authority. Though Rudolph destroyed many castles of the barons, he failed to restore the imperial power to its primitive vigor. He died September 30, 1291.

portant epoch in history—the transference of the English crown from the house of Plantagenet to that of Lancaster. King Richard II. had abdicated the throne the day before in favor of his cousin, Henry of Bolingbroke, who had landed on the coast of Yorkshire a few weeks before, and in an astonishingly short time made himself master of the kingdom. Though manifest usurpation, the seizure of the throne by Henry IV. was fully in accordance with the will of the Nation, which was disgusted with the corrupt and imbecile administration of Richard II. In the ceremony of coronation Henry at first remained seated near the throne, which was empty and covered with cloth of gold. As soon as eight commissioners had proclaimed the sentence of deposition, he arose, approached the throne and, having solemnly crossed himself, said: "In the name of God, the Father, Son and Holy Ghost. I, Henry of Lancaster, challenge the realm of England, because I am descended by right line of blood from the good lord, King Henry III., and through that right, that God of His grace hath sent me with help of my kin, and of my friends, to recover it; the which realm was in point to be undone for default of government and undoing of the good laws." He then knelt for a few minutes in apparent devotion on the steps of the throne on which he subsequently took his seat, being conducted thither by the Archbishops of Canterbury and York.
